RCMP seize pot plants in grow raid

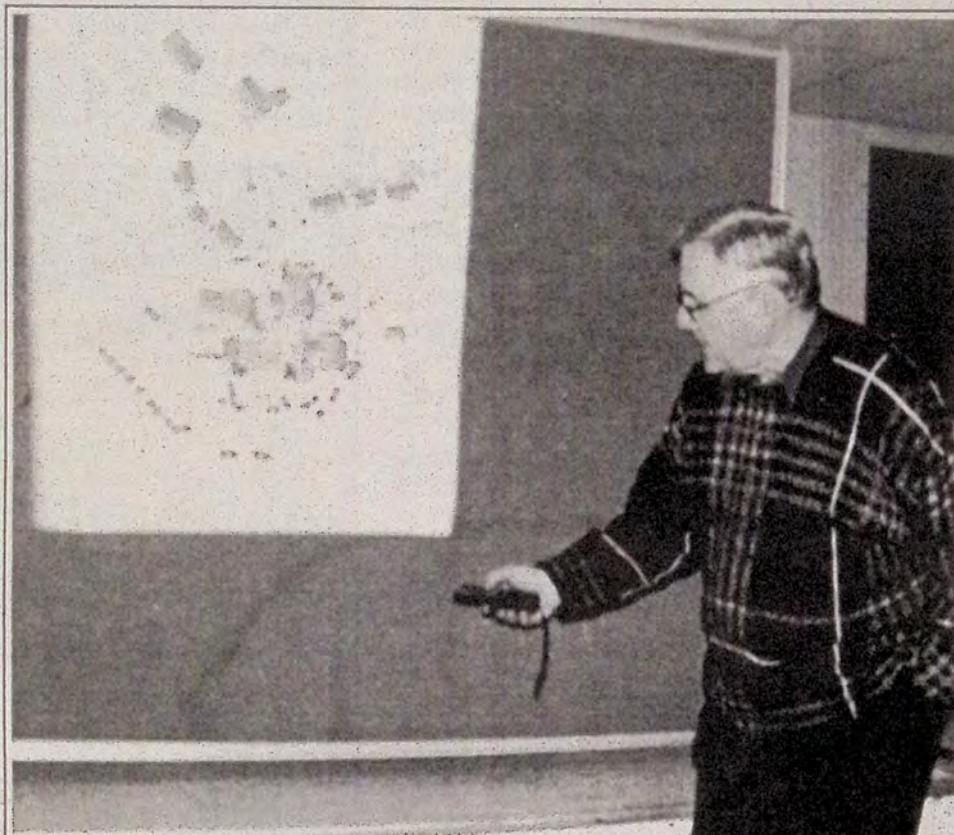

Princeton RCMP seized 120 pot plants in a raid on March 1, 2001. With a search warrant authorizing access to a residence and garage on Pinewood Crescent, located 29 kilometres northeast of Princeton on Highway 40, police entered a double garage and found a grow operation. Although the operation was not large, Cst. Chris Newel said, "It had the makings of being expanded."

A 28 year old male was arrested at the scene. Charges of Production of a Controlled Substance and Possession of a Controlled Substance for the Purpose of Trafficking are pending under the Controlled Drug and Substance Act.

Canadians await May sentencing

Two Canadian men being held in custody in Seattle will wait a long time for sentencing. Both appeared before a grand jury on January 24 to plead guilty to charges of conspiracy to distribute cocaine, money laundering and possession of a semi-automatic handgun.

James David Atkinson will be sentenced on May 18, and Brent Fawcett will be sentenced on June 1. Both are former Princeton residents arrested in a drug bust in Seattle on the weekend of January 20-21, 2001 in a sting operation. A third man, Harold Hill, believed to be the ring leader, has entered a 'not guilty' plea, and will stand trial on May 14, 2001.

Hal J. Merwald, National Director of Young Life of Canada, points out on the site map the various facilities planned for the youth camp to be constructed on the Princeton Stock Ranch property well the deal is final.

- 500 people fill local motels in May

Hal Merwald had everyone's attention as he outlined what Young Life of Canada plans to do with Princeton Stock Ranch property when the deal is finalized. Merwald, National Director of Young Life of Canada, a non-denominational Christian organization dedicated to providing a positive camp experience for teenagers, spoke at the March 13 Chamber of Commerce meeting in Princeton. He explained his organization's need to create another camp because the present camp on the coast, Malibu; cannot take all of the young people who want to go.

Tourists want shopping, culture

There is a "New Tourism" across North America, and Mayor Randy McLean heard about it at a tourism conference in Vancouver. Tourism is the second largest industry in British Columbia and Steven Thorne, executive director of the Okanagan Cultural Corridor Project, told the conference people must begin to understand what the "New Tourism" means to business.

The Okanagan Cultural Corridor Project is a pilot program in B.C. to identify and market the South Okanagan and Similkameen to the "new" tourists. The Tourism Industry Association of America listed the top ten activities among domestic travellers (age 55 plus) in year 2000. It is this "new" tourist for whom the Cultural Corridor Project hopes to develop a marketing strategy.

The number one activity of tourists was shopping. The second was visiting historical sites and museums and the third most popular activity was cultural events. These three activities occupied the time of 56 percent of tourists! Eleven percent did some gambling, and another 11 percent enjoyed outdoor activities (such as golfing, hiking), only eight percent visited parks and seven percent went to beaches.

BC Gas is not to blame

Randy Shaw was the able Master of Ceremonies at the March 13 Chamber of Commerce meeting, and when he introduced Rob Greno from BC Gas, he joked about Greno needing a flak jacket.

Greno admitted BC Gas had gone from one of the most respected corporations in British Columbia to "slightly above ICBC" during the past few months.

The first point Greno made was this: BC Gas does not own natural gas wells, does not own natural gas and does not produce it. BC Gas delivers a product to customers after buying the product from producers.

One of the most difficult things for consumers to understand is the concept of natural gas as a commodity.

Greno explained, "Natural gas is a freely traded commodity."

That means the price of natural gas is determined by supply and demand, not by who delivers it. When BC Gas buys natural gas, BC Gas must compete with many other suppliers to meet customer demands. The commodity is sold through a system much like an auction - the highest bidder gets the gas. To secure a gas supply for customers, BC Gas must bid up to where the competition is bidding.

The commodity price is not regulated, but the utility price (cost of delivery) is regulated. Greno said BC Gas is selling gas to the customer at cost.

The Southern Crossing pipeline actually gave BC Gas access to cheaper sources of natural gas, Greno told Chamber members.

Who is making money out of the high gas prices? First, Greno said, the producers.

Secondly, both the federal and provincial governments are making money from the increased selling price of gas.

Greno said he expects the price to drop in the future, but asked people to look at conserving all types of energy. He pointed out that 15 percent of all natural gas in North America is consumed to produce electricity. He suggested alternative sources of energy and conservation of energy would reduce gas costs.

For people finding it difficult to pay their gas bills, he suggested looking into BC Gas equal payment plan. Contact the company's head office and ask about having your account on this plan.

"Visions" committee sets goals

Princeton Exhibition Association "Visions" Committee has chosen three major projects that need attention at Princeton Fairgrounds.

President George Elliott, at the March 13 meeting of the PXA, that following an impromptu meeting of the committee, discussion revolved around two issues. The power service and water system were chosen top priorities, with improvements to the office added as a third priority.

Princeton Fairgrounds has a total of eight electricity meters. Director Gord Walker suggested that one solution would be to run a single meter off a main distribution centre. Elliott said he would meet with Princeton Light and Power to explore that option. The existing panel boxes will require upgrading as well.

Director Stan Thompson will take care of the water line, which will be relocated as soon as the weather permits.

Office improvements will be handled by Director Skip Jones. Open discussion at the meeting determined that the present office space and design are no longer adequate for groups who regularly use the fairground facility. A number of ideas were put forward based on problems groups had experienced in the past. Jones will look into options that could see the office increased in size to allow for an expanded meeting area for user groups. Improvements to the office area have been delayed for years, pending the construction of the new roof on the grandstand. Now that this work is complete and the weather is improving, plans can go ahead rapidly.

The next meeting of the PXA is scheduled for April 10, at 7:00 p.m., at Princeton Town Hall.

Young Life plans development

Following the video, Merwald used a pointer to describe buildings on a site drawing prepared for presentation. He showed tennis and basketball courts, a cable slide to Willis Creek, a water slide, pavilions, dormitories, and an artists' area. This will be the first camp to offer space for young people interested in the arts. The conference hall, with stage, will open to one of the pavilions, where steps are wide and double as bleachers.

Young Life camps build teens' self-esteem by showing them God creates a beautiful world, and Merwald said they picked the Willis property because "they can't help but see the beauty."

On the long weekend in May, Young Life plans a day of celebration at the site.

"Your motels are all full that weekend," Merwald said. "We've booked every room in town."

Those not accommodated in motel rooms will camp at the site, where a catering company from Penticton will provide lunch and supper. Other meals are up to the individuals coming here.

The Willis "home" ranch will continue to operate as a ranch.

Merwald was unable to state how many jobs would be generated from the camp, as the organization has never run a year-round camp before and has no idea what the demand will be. However, he assured everyone the camp will utilize local services and facilities such as the arena and golf course.

April 7 is the deadline for the deal, and Young Life is awaiting approval to remove 27 acres from the Agricultural Land Reserve before commencing construction.

The facility will have its own water, and a sewerage treatment plant on site. Construction cannot begin until all permits have been obtained. Merwald estimates the camp will open in 2003.

Here is RCMP Constable Barb Prouse reading the News Leader while on vacation in Hawaii. (We have no idea why she was at the Honolulu police station). Cst. Prouse brought us this photo to prove you have to take the News Leader everywhere.

Family history books are still selling

The history of the upper Similkameen area, written by local people about why they or their families came to the valley, is still selling well. Only 240 copies of the book remain, and these are expected to go by the time summer arrives. The committee warns people who intend to purchase the book, or who know somebody who wants a book, to go to Town Hall or the Chamber of Commerce office or to V& S Stedmans on Bridge Street to buy a copy as soon as possible. Most of the copies sold in recent weeks have gone to people outside the area. When the last book is sold, there will be no more. It is not expected to go to second printing.

Chamber members hear D.A.R.E. program

In the fight against drug and alcohol abuse, Cpl. Sam Fedyk and Cst. Bryce Peterson are on the front line. They instruct in the DARE program in elementary and secondary schools. This program teaches youngsters how to say "No!" to drugs and alcohol, and keep on saying "No!"

They showed a video and talked about their program at the March 13 Chamber of Commerce meeting. Cst. Peterson is currently instructing two classes in Princeton. The Princeton class will graduate on May 17.

Several students will give speeches, and every student will make a commitment to avoiding drugs and alcohol in the future. Students will have a real graduation ceremony and each will receive a certificate. Goodies will be part of the picture.

As this program is totally community funded, and is not yet fully sponsored, he encouraged local people and businesses to give support to the program. Donations can be given to the local RCMP office. The RCMP region pays for the training of instructors, but cannot pay the $25 per student required to provide workbooks and incentive items.

Guide Leader Carol Mack, dressed in a sari, puts a dot of red on the forehead of a Girl Guide during International Night.

Youth celebrates international friendships

Princeton Girl Guides, Brownies and Sparks celebrated their world-wide ties on International Night with a visit to India (in the Legion Hall). Guider Carol Mack, dressed in a sari, led the children through a candle-lighting ceremony and an Aarti welcoming ceremony.

The welcoming ceremony is used in homes in India and is meant to bless everyone with good fortune. Each girl had a dab of red and one of yellow placed on her forehead, for good fortune, a sprinkle of grains of rice on the top of the head for prosperity, a betel nut circled over the head for purity, fragrance and good digestion, and a lamp circled over the head signifying the purity of life. A further blessing was coconut and sugar placed in the right hand, for fertility, and a garland around the neck for friendship. All of this was done with many giggles by the girls.

Following the ceremony, girls took turns at activities including dressing in a sari, painting of hands with designs, and learning about India from books. Then everyone sampled some good food from India - basmati rice, Indian stew, fried flatbread (flavoured with saffron), a carrot pudding dessert, and tea brewed with milk, sugar and fennel.

The celebration is an annual event, with different countries recognized from year to year. The celebrations increase the girls' knowledge of the cultures, beliefs, and customs of other nations while recognizing unity through Girl Guides International.

Library receives bonus

Okanagan Regional Library has received an additional, one-time grant of $97,508 for the Library's collection.

Executive Director Lesley Dieno said the grant was like "arriving at a surprise birthday party."

The additional money is especially nice for the Regional Library as it has not been able to fund any increase to its $1.5 million dollar collections budget since 1997, and had been expecting the collection to begin to shrink by year end. The grant money could be used to add up to 4,000 items to the library collection.

A mere five percent of these tourists enjoyed night life, four percent were involved in sports events, and another four percent went to amusement parks.

Why study age 55 plus?

Once again, the baby boomer generation is making an impact, and will make a bigger impact in the next 15 years. They comprise almost one-third of North America's population. They are educated and affluent, and they demand quality experiences. They are responsible for the growth of eco-tourism, adventure tourism and cultural tourism.

What is cultural tourism?

Think about the ancient sites of Egypt, or the old villages and historic sites of Europe. People have flocked to see these sights for generations, and they are cultural tourists, visiting cultural sites. People who attend rodeos, fairs, powwows, music festivals, film festivals, and similar events are cultural tourists as well. The aging boomers will make up one out of every three tourists in coming years, and perhaps an even higher percentage. They will want to see historic sites and museums, and they will want to attend cultural events.

The baby boomer generation is not confined to North America. There are European and Asian boomers, too. All want to see the same kinds of things.

What this change means to the tourist industry:

The tourism focus will shift to the arts, heritage, and agri-tourism attractions. In the Okanagan and Similkameen, the focus will shift to galleries, museums, wineries, and agri-tourism operators. Let's look at those attractions in our own neighbourhoods and start promoting them as a reason to stay in the Similkameen Valley.

The single biggest activity of tourists in North America is shopping (29 percent). What kind of shopping do they want? Probably cultural items unique to the area, something different from what they can find elsewhere, and of good quality. This knowledge should inspire marketing of a different sort, such as marketing of unique products in tourist brochures.

Fanny Podhorodeski and Helen Bishop sort clothing at Keremeos Bargain Centre.

Keremeos Bargain Centre is a boon to people with children and for seniors. All proceeds provide funding for the Ecumenical Parish and its projects. The Bargain Centre meets many needs.

Bargain Centre is a boon

Keremeos Bargain Centre, located on 7th Avenue, is a real boon to the community. It is run by three groups: ACW, Katie Clark and Harmony Circle. These dedicated women do all of the work of sorting, hanging clothing, handling sales and bookkeeping.

The Bargain Centre recycles clothing and other used items, taking donations and selling at very low prices. This is really helpful, especially to families with growing children, or for seniors and others on limited incomes.

The Bargain Centre supports other activities within the community. Over $20,000 is raised annually for the Ecumenical Parish, which includes churches in both Keremeos and Cawston. Through funds raised at the Bargain Centre, the parish is able to achieve much more than it could otherwise do if these funds were not available.

The women who work at the Bargain Centre are volunteers, and they admit it is hard work but they feel a sense of satisfaction. They see the need for this service to the community. On the plus side, they meet a lot of nice people and are pleased to be able to help make family dollars stretch.

For the love of music!

One of the most exciting events of the year happens in the South Similkameen May 24-27. Music Under the K starts with opening ceremonies and entertainment as Similkameen Elementary Secondary School on the evening of Thursday, May 24.

The following morning, school bands and a choir will meet at the school at 8:30 and perform until 12:30 noon. Bands are coming from Prince George, Slocan, Coquitlam, Pender Harbour and Gibsons (so far). The public is welcome to attend.

On Friday afternoon, students will participate in a number of activities, and the public music festival shifts to Bob and Ev's Framing, 1-5 p.m., and Memorial Park 1-9 p.m. The evening will feature Naden Military Band and the Royal Canadian Artillery Band from Edmonton. They are looking forward to performing together. In addition, Friday will feature Keremeos Elementary Band, the Cawston Choir, and Penticton Community Band.

On Saturday, the festival goes on to a grand finale. At 11:00 a.m., Kettle Valley Brakemen will be on stage at Victory Hall with their original music and railroad ballads. The Naden jazz band will perform that day, along with Cawston's own Blackbirds band. At Cawston Community Hall, Bruce Voght of Victoria will be part of a piano concert. Voght will give a workshop during the festival.

The grand finale will take place in the evening at the rodeo grounds, with Calgary Saxophone Quartet, led by Dr. Jeremy Brown, as a special return feature. There will be a massed band performance of all the bands, including the Naden band, playing Pomp and Circumstance.

Many more performers will be at the festival. A schedule of events will be available closer to the festival date.

Keremeos Public Library has a corner for pre-school children. Kids in the know, like the child above, go straight to their special spot.

Joan Armstrong, center, gratefully accepts a $500 cheque from Ray Huey, Chair of Community Health Advisory Committee for Princeton Child Care Services. The money is from the Innovation Fund and will be used for books, toys and crafts. With them is Marilyn Harkness, Health Administrator for the Similkameen Valley.

Family Fair marks 50 years

The fiftieth annual Family Fair will be held on Thursday, April 26, 2001, at 1:00 p.m. at the Princeton Secondary School gym. The first Family Fair was held in 1951, sponsored by the Parent Teachers Association. It was a way of raising money for playground equipment for the only school in town at that time - Princeton Secondary School, located where Dairy Queen is now. The Family Fair evolved into an annual fundraiser for each year's graduating class.

Plans are now underway for the fiftieth Family Fair to raise money for bursaries and scholarships for Year 2001 grads.

The Family Fair requests "garage sale" type items as donations to the fair, which is like a flea market, tea and fun fair all in one. No clothing will be accepted, but games, puzzles, plants, books, jewelry, handicrafts and white elephant type of goods, clean and in good condition, would be appreciated. A bake sale is part of the fair, and donations of baking and candy are most welcome. Items may be dropped off at the office of any local school from April 23 to 25, or will be picked up if you call 295-6605 or 295-7753 in the evening. All items should be at the school gym no later than 6:00 p.m. Wednesday, April 25.

The "Taste of Princeton" raffle will happen again this year, with numerous dinners for two as prizes. Nearly every restaurant in town has a meal to be won.

Hospital Auxiliary plans active spring

by M.C. Trehearne

The regular meeting of Princeton Hospital Auxiliary was held March 12. As usual, there was a cheerful report on the Thrift Shop: Carol Seaman noted that a lot of winter stock has been sold, and now there are racks of spring and summer garments on display.

Members were asked to donate items for the silent auction to be held in conjunction with the Florence Nightingale Tea on May 8.

Kristine Dalen told us that sweaters, size 2 to 6, are needed for the Gift Shop. (There's still time to do knitting before we're involved in gardening.) At the meeting, three lap robes for the hospital and Ridgewood Lodge were received, as well as two baby sets and two pairs of slippers for the Gift Shop. Thank you, all the clever hands that made these items.

Betty Reheis will attend a "new Presidents" convention in Kelowna at the end of March.

Guest speaker was Jane MacKay who is co-ordinator of The Anchorage, the mental health

There will be a cake walk, tea in the cafeteria served by Ambassador candidates, and a student baking contest.

Volunteers are needed to help set up on the evening before the fair, and to help during the fair. Anyone who would like to volunteer is asked to call the numbers above.

The Family Fair Committee hopes everyone will support the fair by attending and participating. In past years, the fair has raised thousands of dollars to assist local grads to attend post-secondary educational programs.

drop-in centre located at the former Arbor House. Jane explained that this provides a friendly, understanding welcome for adults with emotional or mental health difficulties. Activities will include exercise classes, gardening, arts and crafts. An Open House is planned for May so that members of the public can see for themselves. Auxiliary members appreciated learning about this community-based support service. Thank you, Jane!

The next meeting of the Auxiliary will be Monday, April 9, at 2:00 p.m. in the hospital board room.

FINANCIAL FOCUS

Taking Action In A Market Correction

A sudden drop in the market can be daunting. But there are positive steps you can take now to use a market correction to your benefit.

- 1. Take Another Look At Your Portfolio's Track Record
 Check the value of your portfolio at the end of 1998. Then look at its worth today. Use this as your benchmark or, if you'd rather, your reality check. You may well find that, despite any recent drop, you are still ahead of where you were two years earlier.
- 2. Examine Each Stock Individually.
 Some stocks have seen exceptional performance over the past few years. If a stock represents more than 10 per cent of your portfolio, the capital gains recognized from selling it may offset losses from other holdings in your portfolio. It may pay to consult a tax expert to help you decide.
- 3. Review Your Industry Diversification.
 If all your holdings were in one industry, and that industry experienced a downturn, your portfolio would pay the price. That's why it makes sense to spread your investments over several types of industries. Should one sector decline, consider it an opportunity to flesh out your portfolio with strong companies at lower prices. Start with industries that are expected to experience above-average growth in the next several years, such as consumer staples, financial services, health care and technology.
- 4. Look Beyond Your Borders.
 Investing in foreign markets offers several benefits. For one thing, emerging markets may offer growth potential. As well, you can invest in companies that represent goods and services not available in Canada. And, most important, investing outside of Canada can offer your portfolio protection in case Canadian markets experience a downturn.

Market fluctuations happen periodically and knowledgeable investors know how to ride them out to their benefit. Recent fluctuations mean you should ensure your portfolio includes equities in the growth-and-income category, as well as fixed-income investments. The best way to increase your holdings is on a dollar-cost-averaging approach, rather than trying to time a sometimes volatile market. And it pays to remember your long-term perspective.

Safety equipment for emergencies

What would you do in a really serious emergency situation? Natural disasters are usually the cause of the most severe emergency situations, and it is surprising how few people are prepared. Earthquakes, snowstorms, floods and forest fires can rob you of your home and its comforts.

Remember the Tulameen fire of September 1998? People had to prepare for evacuation. Remember the flood of 1995? People were forced to flee their homes. Remember the big snowstorm of 1996? Roads were closed and people were stranded.

Emergency survival kits can be made up of things already in your home, but first, you need to be sure you have all these items. Everyday items like flashlights, matches or blankets could help you and your loved ones survive an emergency.

Emergency necessities:
 Battery radio (for information) and spare batteries, flashlights (one for each member of the household) and extra batteries, bottled water, water purification kits, non-perishable foods (freeze-dried fruit, canned meat), manual can opener, first aid kit, fire extinguisher (class ABC), portable cooking stove and correct fuel, waterproof matches and candles (short fat longburning candles preferred), space blanket (heat-reflecting blankets save lives), car kits containing flares, fluorescent distress flags, shovels, ice scrapers and booster cables, toiletries (soap, dental supplies, diapers for infants), pet food and pet ID tag. Orange or yellow garbage bags make good signal flags and can double as rain wear or shelter. A large bucket with a tight-fitting lid can be used as a toilet. A Swiss army pocket knife is indispensable. Put spare house and car keys in the kit.

Place your emergency supplies that could be harmed by water in a sturdy plastic container with a tight lid. Store it close to your exit door.

Arrange a meeting place with family members, and practice evacuation of your home. Stay informed: If the power fails, your battery radio will help keep you informed about what is going on in your area, and will tell you whether emergency shelters have been established and where they are located.

Candles and portable cook stove will provide light and heat. Be cautious about cooking indoors without adequate ventilation.

Open flame requires oxygen.

In a flood situation, you might have time to remove valuables from your home and extra clothing if you are alert to what is going on. Listening to the local radio on a regular basis is always advisable. Many natural disasters have adequate warning time (except earthquakes, avalanches and landslides) so you can be prepared if you have to leave your home. Valuable documents should be kept together in a container for quick removal, and should be in a place easily reached in a hurry.

This amino acid prolongs health and life

Amino acids are nutrients which work in many ways to help maintain health. Each amino acid performs a different function. For optimum health, we need all of them, but a few of them work wonders. One of these special amino acids is L-Cysteine. It is formed from another amino acid in the body, L-methionine, in the presence of Vitamin B6. L-Cysteine is available in tablet form on its own.

One of the best free radical destroyers, L-Cysteine works best when taken with selenium and vitamin E. L-Cysteine protects the cells from the harmful effects of radiation, and protects the liver and brain from damage due to alcohol and cigarette smoke. It is recommended in the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis. L-Cysteine has a chelating effect, removing excess copper from the body. It also promotes the burning of fat and building of muscle.

L-Cysteine breaks down mucus in the respiratory tract, and is often beneficial in the treatment of bronchitis, emphysema and tuberculosis.

This amino acid is easily converted into L-cystine, which offers the same benefits, and is necessary for the body to form L-Glutathione, a powerful antioxidant that slows down the formation of free radicals. It is a detoxifier, reducing the side effects of chemotherapy and X-rays. It removes harmful metals from the body.

L-cystine aids in the formation of skin and reduces the body's absorption of copper; protecting against copper toxicity, an important function in the Similkameen, where the ground water contains higher than normal amounts of copper. It assists in the activity of white blood cells and in the supply of insulin the the pancreas.

Amino acids should be taken on an empty stomach, and in pure crystalline form for best results. Consult your physician before taking any amino acids.

Local students fly to London and Paris

Some Princeton Secondary School students are spending spring break in London and Paris. An excited group left school by bus on Wednesday afternoon to catch a flight to London, England. Their itinerary called for sightseeing in London for two days, with optional excursions to Oxford, Stratford and Stonehenge. They were to see the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace, the Houses of Parliament and St. Paul's Cathedral.

On the sixth day of their tour, they were scheduled to travel to Canterbury to see the cathedral, then go to the white cliffs of Dover to board a ferry to France, and go on to Paris.

In Paris, they were to take a tour of the city, including visits to Notre Dame Cathedral, the Louvre, and an excursion to Palais Versailles.

On the ninth day, they will fly back to Canada.

The last to board the bus for Vancouver airport, and on to Europe, teacher tour guide Steve Fitzpatrick assures parents he will bring back "most" of the children. "If you don't want them back," he joked, "Speak now."

Rebekahs enjoyed potato game

by D. Stenvold, p.c.

Arthritis is one of the health problems so many endure. We discovered 11 of 12 Rebekahs had, or were affected by arthritis.

Last year, the Oddfellow and Rebekah Lodges in B.C. contributed $30,000 to this society. Last year the Sovereign Grand Lodge was presented with a grandfather clock in recognition of their contribution of over $1 million to this cause, and at the 50-year celebration of the beginning of the Arthritis Society, the Oddfellows and Rebekahs were named one of their heroes for these efforts.

Yes! The Irish gals arrived for our meeting. They stood stiffly and quietly, with unseeing eyes, little green arms outstretched waiting to be adopted by a Sister while enjoying her tea. The members had a puzzling time constructing the "potato people" who arrived in various parcels of pieces. A sight to behold! The table was adorned with green tissue shamrock, green and white candy canes and green serviettes. We had green jello and cookies after the lovely sandwiches with our tea. Sister Pam won the pretty table prize, completing a happy afternoon.

The art of seed germination

by Anna Bartlett of Don and Anna's Greenhouses

After the winter and all of us plant addicts have been going through withdrawals because of the lack of planting plants, we get back in the greenhouses and start planting and it is such an incredible good feeling. The sun, humidity and heat in a greenhouse are like being in Puerto Vallarta Mexico.

When first starting the greenhouse, one of the most important jobs is to get the seeding done. One question I hear a lot is: I've tried germinating my (example Echinacea) seed but nothing came up. Every seed requires its own special treatment to germinate properly.

I can't begin to go through every seed but I will go through some of the different categories of seed germination.

Seeds that need to be covered with a potting mix and need total darkness to germinate: in my greenhouse I use black plastic for this group. Some examples include vegetables such as all your Cole crops, tomatoes, and peppers. These seeds prefer total darkness until they germinate. Once they have started to sprout make sure you take the covering off quickly.

Seeds that don't like to be covered and need light to germinate: some examples are flowers like petunias, impatiens, and lobelia. Remember not to let these dry out. Some home gardeners use the plastic covers for these, but I find in a greenhouse environment the sun can easily burn these seedlings if these plastic covers are left on through a sunny day.

Seed that must be frozen for some time before trying to germinate them in either light or dark: a lot of your perennials fall into this category. Some only need to be frozen 24 hours, but some need up to 4 weeks. I use my freezer for these seeds.

Seeds that like to be soaked in water for at least 24 hours: Lupines and Geraniums are good examples.

Seed that needs to be stratified. These seeds need to be put in a plastic bag with good wet potting medium and frozen for at least 3 weeks. An example of this one is the Echinacea.

Certain seed need to be nicked before planting.

Have you all heard of certain plants that only germinate after a fire?

How about plants that only germinate after they go through the cycle of a bird eating them and being passed back onto the land? How many of you remember Sue Bastin that was working at Don and Anna's a few years ago? She went to Victoria to work with Native Plants, and says she really has fun trying to reproduce this example.

One thing that most seeds have in common though is they will not germinate without a good clean potting soil, and water. We are extremely lucky in our valley to be able to use our tap water. Some areas need to use special purified water because of the excess chlorine in the tap water interferes with germination.

After germination each plant needs a different temperature to grow so always read up on what you are germinating before seeding because it will certainly make a difference to your success. A mistake quite often made when germinating seed in your own home is to start seeding too early. The lighting near a window is not the same as in a greenhouse and causes your plants to search for light and become spindly. Weak plants do not survive once placed out in the real world of the windy Similkameen Valley.

Good germination ensures a good crop.

Trout Talk by John Sandness

How to keep your fishing rod in shape

by John Sandness, Similkameen Valley outdoorsman

In my opinion, the most important thing to do is keep your fishing rod in a CASE. Like most advice, a person would do well to follow the good advice himself. "Practice what you preach" is the adage! So many rods are broken by car doors, crushed by having things piled on top of them or, the most frustrating of all, having the spring-loaded mechanism on your screen door close that door on the last six inches of your favourite rod as you try to beat its closure. A case would prevent these originally nine-foot fly rods becoming eight and a half footers, or even less!

Next, I would pay very close attention to the guides and tip-top. Any roughness or cracks will really tear up a nice $40 fly line and cost you a lost fish if you are spinning with a monofilament line. A cotton swab (Q-Tip) will be caught in these rough spots and provides an easy checking device. Simply rotate the swab in the guide. If you find a bad guide, replace it. It really isn't that difficult! Your job may not look original, but with care, will certainly be good enough.

Rod handles get dirty and fish slime doesn't help, either! Soapy water will clean up the handle in most cases, but if the dirt has really built up, and the cork is rough, you might find a light sand-papering will do a better job.

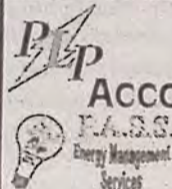

A tip you might want to follow is to shape the handle to fit your own hand. I find most fly rod handles too large to fit my small hand. By shaping my homemade rod to custom fit my hand, I cast much more comfortably. A little sand-papering, with frequent checks for fit, was all that was needed. I can now cast for hours with no fatigue in my hand. Continued next page

Another tip: don't put your rods away wet in the case for extended periods of time. For a few hours, okay. Better a wet rod in a case than a broken, dry rod on the bed of the truck or in the trunk of your car. However, the finish, line wrappings, etc. on a glass rod, and the entire bamboo rod, will suffer if you leave the wet rod in a case for days or weeks, especially in hot weather.

Modern glass fly and spinning rods are very sturdy. Graphite and boron rods are a little less able to take a beating, but still much stronger and more durable than split bamboo rods. Many anglers like bamboo, and I have a number of them, including the Christmas fly rod I wrote about before. With reasonable care, a modern rod will last for years. Hardly ever is a rod broken by a fish. Mostly, the rod is broken by the angler.

One last tip, and it will sound strange, I'm sure. Have you ever, at the end of the day's fishing, had trouble taking the rod apart? The ferrules on the rod seem to be welded together! You can't put the rod back into the safety of its case! Major frustration. Here is what an older angler showed me when I was just starting out. Rub the rod ferrule in your hair or, as I do now, not having too much snow on top, rub the male ferrule on my scalp. The lanolin oil there lubricates the ferrule. Put the rod together, and you will be amazed at how easily it comes apart at the end of the day.

Keep an eye on the guides of your rods. If they are cracked or rough, replace them. Your line can be ruined otherwise.

Hope you have good fishing now, and for even more fun, take a youngster, or your wife, or both, out fishing. You will find it enjoyable. I think, watching them have fun, too.

Correction from last week: Our favourite angler did NOT tell you to leave your monofilament line on the shore. That was our mistake! NEVER leave your fishing lines or hooks or any other trash in the outdoors where birds and animals can be injured by them.

PeeWees end great season

by Steve LePoidevin

On the weekend of March 10 and 11, the Mac Lind Logging PeeWees wound up their hockey season with two games against two different teams from Merritt. On Saturday, after lots of back and forth action, the game ended at 4-4.

On Sunday, the team met for their final game of the season. There was nothing on the scoreboard until Patrick LePoidevin slammed one past the goalie soon into second period, with an assist by Tanner Gunn. It seemed this would be a tight match when Merritt came back two minutes later to tie it up. Halfway through second period, Kevin Blank bounced the puck off Russ Fletcher's helmet into the net after a pass from Tanner. Before the period ended, Princeton managed two more goals by Lewis Smith and Dan Wanner, with assists by Jake Greening and Tanner. With a hat-trick by Jake in third period, and one more goal by Lewis, the final score was 8-1.

The excellent goal-tending by Rylan Mogge and Kyle Markin helped to keep the opposition's score to a minimum. Braydon, Tyson, Luke, Nigel, Adam, Kyle, and Daniel each did his part in ensuring the team had a successful weekend.

Weekend scorers: Jake (3 goals, 1 assist), Lewis (2 goals, 2 assists), Patrick (1 goal, 1 assist), Russ (1 goal), Daniel (1 goal), Tanner (3 assists), Kevin (1 assist).

Throughout the season, all members of the team played well and continued to improve their skills on the ice. The PeeWees would like to thank their coach, Mel

Morosse, for all his support and work during the season, and all of the parents who helped on and off the ice during the year. It takes a lot of time and effort by many different people to ensure a successful season for a minor hockey team.

Will there be minor ball this year?

Last year's Minor Ball executive met this past week to see who would be running for the 2001 season. Out of the 12 positions, only two have been filled. It was decided that registration should take place and if there is no interest, there would be no need to try to fill the other 10 positions.

Registration for the 2001 year will take place on Saturday,

March 31, 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. at Overwaitea. Softball BC rates have increased so registration will have to increase. All divisions will pay $55.00. Children who are moving up to the Squirts division will have to pay an additional $10.00. If there is not a good turnout, there will not be a season this year!

Horoscopes March 20 to 27

ARIES - Things move fast for you now, in a very positive way, but you may have some stress from secret worries. Travel, education and publicity are uppermost in your concern. Expect excitement.

TAURUS - Be cautious about hazy thinking when your worries bother you. Do not let your imagination make matters worse. Make gains by positive thinking. Recent troubles are nearly over.

GEMINI - You may feel like going out this weekend and living it up, but if you plan to go partying, be a little cautious. Booze and/or drugs can be dangerous for you now. Keep a clear head.

CANCER - Career matters must take precedence now. You will be tempted to drift into a false sense of security. Wake up! Pay attention! Next week will be difficult if you slack off this week.

LEO - Friends may be upset due to high expectations and false promises, or you may be disappointed by them for the same reasons. Keep your head and your common sense.

VIRGO - Communication with a partner becomes very important this week. You will find that efforts to talk yield positive outcomes. You could have a happy week. Benefits come to you.

LIBRA - Important news arrives regarding your job and your health. Partnership matters go well, but you do not feel motivated. This is the low point of your year. Take a rest if you can.

SCORPIO - Focus on taxes, insurance and investment this week. You can gain financial benefits. Children bring pleasure now. Work duties and health are under good influences. Looks like a good week.

SAGITTARIUS - You now begin a very positive period lasting until June. The pace picks up. Pay attention to all information coming your way. Creativity is highlighted - use contacts for gain.

CAPRICORN - Home matters are easily resolved. Pay attention to basics. Private worries will be eased by action. Health is good. You are entering a learning phase. Challenges tend to be positive.

AQUARIUS - You should receive positive financial news this week. You will be tempted to take mental flights of fancy. Keep your common sense in high gear! What you imagine can make trouble.

PISCES - Your focus shifts to financial concerns now, but the career challenges you face must be your major concern. This is a longterm trend. Siblings and neighbours are nice to you.

POINTS OF VIEW

OUR VIEW

Techies forgot the human nature element

Anyone watching the stock markets during the past few months has seen a steady decline in the value of technology stocks in particular areas affected by the ordinary consumer. Mobile telephones and Internet products are the big losers, along with those companies that invested heavily in Internet selling.

The mobile phone manufacturers would like to think every person on the planet is going to buy a mobile phone, but it just will not happen. Although the mobile "cell" phone is a boon to many people, not everyone needs or wants one. There are people who actually try to escape the demanding ring of the telephone. The market reached a plateau, and sales declined. The value of stocks declined. This does not mean nobody will buy another cell phone nor does it mean these stocks are worthless. What it means is: the boom is over.

Internet shopping was obviously over-rated, and although many companies pumped millions into online catalogues and online direct sales, the returns never met their expectations. Some consumers had the misfortune to buy by Internet and then never receive the products they purchased. It does not take long for that kind of news to spread, which further impeded the market.

Internet companies offered advertising opportunities to customers, but again, the expectations were too high. People on Internet tend to ignore the advertisements in favour of seeking the information they need. Advertising on Internet did not yield the returns advertisers looked for.

What has happened is not about the products or the people who operate Internet. If we look at Internet from the 'people' perspective, we see people who must sit for hours in front of a computer screen to read advertisements and product information. A high percentage of us spend time in front of a computer screen at work — we do not want to spend our free time the same way.

Another human element is the shopping experience, which is a form of recreation for many people. The majority want to go out of the house, look at lots of different products, touch or try on the products, and take their purchase home immediately. The old-fashioned marketplace is still the best for human nature.

A trip gives us new ideas

by Joe Schwarz, local humorist

It's nice to take a bit of a break and take a trip. So rather than spend our 25 cents in the U.S., we opted to visit family in Nelson, B.C. on Kootenay Lake, see the sights, shop and talk to the folks.

The city, with its golden gate bridge, has its own blue uniformed police force and produces its own electricity on the Kootenay River, the same river from which PLP gives power to the people of the Similkameen.

Nelson is doing an enviable job with their waterfront, which includes a park, trolley line, pier, sports fields, lake-side groomed leisure done by the various service clubs side by side with their plaques. This is bordered by a walking or jogging track running parallel to the lake with its water fowl. It appears to be an ongoing project.

As Mr. Stolth mentioned in a recent letter to the Leader regarding a proposed park near the Princeton Chamber, the tourist visitor building's appearance is very important to the town. He is right on. Nelson bears this out. Nelson is off the beaten track but is said to have an influx of Albertan and German money. There is to be a referendum on a $19 million civic complex that includes anything from arenas to seniors' needs. They already have an enviable indoor swimming facility. The town truly has its own personality. They're quite vocal and environmentally inclined.

A large old tree located on a busy boulevard intersection between the court house and city was slated to be cut down, so people picketed the area. When it was cut down, there was a memorial service for the tree. I guess, instead of dust to dust, it was sawdust to sawdust.

Recently, 200 dog lovers marched down the street with their dogs on leashes in favour (as near as I know) of doggie poopie rights in certain areas when the dogs aren't on leashes.

A new large, smart-looking ferry was built, named the Osprey, replacing two old ones.

Nelson people are not at all happy with their hospital and are doing something to change it. It is dowdy and spaceless. It simply does not compare with our Princeton Hospital, small as it is.

The health minister is their MLA, Corky Evans, who is going to run for the New Democrat Party, although he feels he is the underdog.

Others of his team are running, not for re-election, but with their thousand-dollar pensions and visions of heroes in their own mind.

The economy in the Nelson area is not good. The mall has empty stores. Overwaita staff took a salary cut and lost six employees or else face closure. A rebuilt Safeway is doing well despite the fact they have a four cent charge for empty recyclables instead of giving five cents for a returned pop can. We could not help but feel the major industry in southern B.C. has to be "Welfare."

At a local 7-11 store, packaged firewood from Princeton's Fire-master was for sale.

Let's hope the lumber trade agreement with the U.S., which ends at the end of March, will be satisfactorily resolved. It's critical to the economic health of the Interior despite it being rich and beautiful.

Current Comment by Dawn Johnson

We establish our priorities, but how well?

We, the citizens of this valley and this community, have been blessed with an excellent high-way rescue crew. All of them are volunteers, and one of these days, they may save your life.

You may believe the ambulance crew would rescue you if your car went over an embankment, or your vehicle was squashed and somebody had to rip off the doors and windows to take you out. Sorry! The ambulance crew does not do this. They call the rescue crew. If the rescue crew does not arrive in time, you're toast.

There is this thing called the "golden hour" by people in the trauma treatment business. The golden hour is the amount of time in which your life can be saved. If you receive treatment in that golden hour, you will likely live. If you do not receive treatment within that hour, your chances are severely reduced.

The Rescue Society called for donations to provide them with a new truck, and some people, like the elderly couple who gave $1,000 each, responded immediately. However, Nick Goreas says the crew is disappointed by how few corporate donations have been made.

The News Leader was proud to give space to promote their plea for help and to show the scenes these volunteers attend. When the photo appeared in The Province, it was our photo, and we gave the proceeds to the Rescue Society.

When we told the accounts person at The Province where the money would go, he said, "What about you?"

Before I could answer, he added, "Oh, yeah, you guys are on the road all the time, aren't you?"

Of course! All of us travel the highway, and any one of us could have an accident any time we are out there. Some local companies, like Jebway, recognized their vulnerability and made a substantial donation. Others, whose employees drive long distances in the course of going to and from work, have yet to make a donation.

Register now for Spring Storytime

Few children learn to love books by themselves. Someone has to show them the way. To plant the seed and nurture it, Princeton Public Library offers pre-school storytime. This free service starts April 6 and there is limited registration. To register your child for this program, phone 295-6495 in the afternoon on Tuesdays, Wednesdays or Fridays. Storytime is open to children ages three to five.

We know there are big demands on everybody's wallets these days, especially with the increase in the cost of home heating, and donations for other worthy causes. Around here, we know some of the causes are not as urgent as having that new truck on the highway. We urge you to put first things first and buy the truck.

Yes, we agree the provincial government should be buying the truck, especially WCB or ICBC, but until they do, it is up to us, for our own sake and for the people we love, and for the sake of human decency.

Nick Goreas, President of Princeton Rescue Society (left) accepts a $500 cheque from Vicki Marr, Secretary of Timberline Cruisers Snowmobile Club, in appreciation for the work the rescue crew did during SnoCross 2001. The money will be used for the new rescue truck.

Heart Food

by Dave Machin

I know the thoughts that I think toward you, thoughts of peace and not of evil, to give you a hope and an expected end. (Jeremiah 29:11) We have been created sovereign beings with our own free will. We can do what we want to and also think what we want to think. Think about this a bit. Our thoughts all have an origin. They may come from something we have seen, something we have heard, or something we have experienced. Thoughts are not physically provable things, for no one can read your mind. The thoughts that we open up our hearts to will eventually lead us to do the things that we do. We have the choice to embrace a thought and build on it or simply refuse it. Every one of us was created to be motivated from the inside out. I said above that no one can read our thoughts but we can know what someone is thinking about by listening to what they say. Many of us have believed lies for years and these things have dominated our thinking. Take, for example, what you think about God. I daresay there have been more things thought about Him than we could possibly number. God gave us His word so we could read it and then think about it and eventually believe it in our hearts and allow it to change us. God's thoughts toward us never change no matter who you are or what you have done. He loves you unconditionally and wants the best for you. Let yourself think on that thought. God is good, His word is good and good all the time.

Museum joins Meadowlark Festival

Princeton Museum will host part of the Meadowlark Festival on May 19. Approximately 20 naturalists from the South Okanagan and Similkameen will attend a lecture on fossils, will see the fossil collection in Princeton, then will go looking for fossils in the Princeton area. The lecture will begin at 9:00 a.m. but the museum will not be open to the general public until 11:00 a.m. At the regular meeting of Princeton Museum Society, President Don Coyle announced a $1,381 grant has been received from Vancouver Foundation to pay for the partition in the fossil display area. The partition protects museum equipment and displays not accessible without supervision. A $1,750 grant from the Arts Council added to the museum treasury, helping to pay for the many expenses incurred by the museum for storage equipment, and for accession work, such as the work done by two experts who evaluated part of the Pollard collection. This cost over $1,000. The museum is undergoing a change of displays, in preparation for spring opening. Coyle asked for members and other volunteers to come to the museum on Saturday mornings at 10:00 a.m. to help move artifacts. Kathy Clement suggested approaching some of the young people in Princeton to see if they would be interested in helping. Those who are interested in history and artifacts may find the experience enjoyable. Members agreed to allow her to approach students. Dave Coghlin talked about the possibility of Princeton having a Katimavik group work at the museum next winter, and members felt it would be a good idea. The museum has been given two prints from the Freeman family. John Albert Freeman settled in Princeton in 1910, and his son, Wilfred Freeman, painted a watercolour of Bridge Street in 1930. A print taken from the original is now in the museum collection but must be framed. A wood-cut print done by Winnifred Freeman was sent, framed, to the museum, and the Freeman family says there will be more. A slot machine from Granite City has been in the museum for a number of years, and Tom and Gloria Stout undertook the job of repairing it and refinishing it. Continued next page

Everybody loves a circus, and these students sing about the fun when the circus comes to town.

No circus is complete without plenty of clowns.

Ferocious lions came to the circus, and here they are!

Circus, Circus

John Allison Elementary School put on a great show called Circus, Circus, featuring all of the students, who are very talented! The students performed two shows on March 15, one in the afternoon, and one in the evening. The gym was crowded with parents, grandparents and friends.

Circus, Circus had all the good stuff we expect from a circus - clowns, high wire act, trapeze artists, stunt performers, lions, elephants and a marching band, but the ringmaster was stricken with laryngitis, which was the plot of the play. There was plenty of good music and singing, and Ms Brewer's skipping team did an outstanding job of showing what tricks youngsters can do while handling a skipping rope. It was an exciting production, definitely worth seeing.

Mrs. Adams did a great job as director, and the people managing the props and lights deserve mention for their excellence.

Gloria reported the machine is in working order but is missing a couple of parts. They are trying to track down where parts might be obtained.

Gloria Stout presented, on behalf of Walton Smart, a photo of the Last Spike of the Kettle Valley Railway (appearing in last week's News Leader) and the book about Arthur Evans, union organizer. The book, titled "Work and Wages", has several sections significant to Princeton's history. These sections tell about beatings of mine employees and the involvement of the Ku Klux Klan in union-busting efforts. The book will be placed in the archives, but the Princeton sections will be enlarged and put on display.

B.C. Chair says "Challenge candidates in next election"

Archie Novakowski, Chair of BC Chamber of Commerce, was guest speaker at the March 13 meeting of Princeton & District Chamber of Commerce. He encouraged members to look ahead to the provincial election and challenge candidates as to where they stand in relation to the principles of Chambers of Commerce.

Novakowski asked members to list five major local issues and ask each candidate to state his or her position. He reminded members that Chambers of Commerce are non-partisan, but have principles regarding how the government should do business, and how the government should treat business. He took several shots at government policies, saying there should be no tax on business equipment and machinery used in business, the lack of transparency in aboriginal treaty negotiations and the high cost of the Forest Practices to B.C.'s biggest industry

He noted one of the local problems within Chamber is the need for volunteers to help with Chamber work. He suggested members ask the community at large for volunteer help.
